AI MEETS HRM

Date: January 19-21, 2026 | Location: IIM Indore Campus

PROGRAMME OVERVIEW

Artificial Intelligence (AI) systems and AI driven applications have started pervading personal, social, and organizational spaces. Personal assistants (e.g. Cortana), home assistants (e.g. Alexa), and organizational interfacing assistants such as chatbots are promising and delivering enhanced efficiency and user convenience. Organizations too have started realizing the advantages and efficiency benefits attained by leveraging AI systems in a variety of applications as well as higher-order decision making functions. However, the expected surge in AI adoption by organizations has been anything but smooth. For one, given the organizational legacy, finding the optimal system has been a persistent problem. Secondly, employees who perceive AI systems as competitors for corporate resources have been known to oppose its adoption. More crucially, the exponential expansion of AI skills into analytical and thinking tasks has been speculated to limit human workers into the ever-narrowing niche of interpersonal and empathetic duties. In this context, this programme offers the much needed bridge between AI and the most significant pillar of organizations, namely, Human Resource Management (HRM).

OBJECTIVES

The course has multiple objectives:

- To understand the emergent themes and subthemes that lie at the interface of AI-HRM.
- To understand the causes and different models at play in engaging AI with HR.
- To understand and predict the evolution of AI and HRM in the near and distant future.

CONTENT

The course will cover a host of topics, including:

- The theoretical evolution of AI and its impact on human resources in organizations.
- Empirical evidence about the impact of AI.
- The processes involved in the objective adoption of AI.
- The reactionary outcomes of AI imposition on human resources.
- How AI and HR co-evolve and co-prosper in an organizational setting.

The course will be delivered by faculty members at IIM Indore, aided by a combination of classroom lectures, cases, exercises, and self-report questionnaires.
