PROGRAMME PEDAGOGY

Case Studies | Simulations | Workshop | Campus Immersion

Case Studies

The Case Study Method pioneered by Harvard University, engrosses participants in a thought-provoking, interactive process of recognising pertinent issues & utilising practical solutions to overcome organisational and leadership challenges. Through Case Study Method, participants are able to size up business problems quickly while considering the broader organizational, industry, and societal context. Participants recall concepts better when they are set in a case, much as people remember words better when used in context.

Goodyear The Aquatred Launch: Harvard Business School

After many years of R&D, Goodyear has developed the Aquatred, an innovative new tire. However, the tire industry has matured and evolved, raising questions concerning the Aquatred's ability to gain support from Goodyear's independent tire dealers. Participants use information on channel evolution and consumer behaviour to make two decisions: whether to launch the Aquatred and whether to expand Goodyear's distribution network. Also explores issues involved in managing a complex distribution structure during a time of rapid change.

Frasier: Harvard Business School

In 2001, NBC entered into contract negotiations with Paramount Television Group to keep the hit show "Frasier" on the network. Paramount, the studio that produced the show, threatened to move "Frasier" to CBS, Paramount's sister network, if NBC did not agree to a substantially higher license fee than the one it was currently paying. This case follows Marc Graboff's (EVP of NBC West Coast) analysis of the situation.

DELL Working Capital: Harvard Business School

The company markets its computers directly to its customers and builds computers after receiving a customer order. This build-to-order model enables Dell to have much smaller investment in working capital than its competitors. It also enables Dell to fully enjoy the benefits of reduction in component prices and to introduce new products more quickly. Dell has grown quickly and has been able to finance that growth internally by its efficient use of working capital and its profitability. This case highlights the importance of working capital management in a rapidly growing firm.

Southwest Airlines: Harvard Business School

Southwest Airlines, a small intrastate carrier serving Dallas, Houston and San Antonio, begins service in 1971 in the face of competition by two larger, entrenched airlines. Improved quality service, lower prices, and innovative advertising and promotional strategy bring Southwest to the brink of profitability in early 1973, when its major competitor halves fare on Southwest's major route. Management wonders what response to make. This case, focuses on advertising and promotional strategy through June 1971.

Cola Wars Continue: Coke and Pepsi in 2006 - Harvard Business School

Examines the industry structure and competitive strategy of Coca-Cola and Pepsi over 100 years of rivalry. New challenges in 2006 include boosting flagging carbonated soft drink (CSD) sales and finding new revenue streams. Both firms also began to modify their bottling, pricing, and brand strategies. They looked to emerging international markets to fuel growth and broaden their portfolios of alternate beverages like tea, juice, sports drinks, energy drinks, and bottled water.

BBVA Compass: Marketing Resource Allocation: Harvard Business School

BBVA Compass, the 15th largest commercial bank in the U.S., is a part of the BBVA Group of Spain, the second largest bank in Spain with $755 billion in assets. In December 2010, Frank Sottosanti, Chief Marketing Officer of BBVA Compass, was reviewing the marketing performance of the company and deciding how to allocate next year's marketing budget across various offline and online channels.

Simulations

Business Simulations provide the opportunity to simulate the real-world and encourage new skill development. Participants develop new skills like resilience, teamwork, and leadership by managing competing priorities and a constant influx of information. Business Simulations provide a playground to make mistakes and learn to pivot. It gives the opportunity to experiment with various strategies, make tough decisions, and face consequences in real-time; the perfect way to tee up a rich class discussion.

Workshops

Preparatory workshops help participants build foundational skills in various functions of management. Workshops act as a stepping stone towards the main sessions and help to interact better in the class.

Workshop on Case Study Analysis

Workshop on Corporate Finance

Workshop on Group Case Presentations
