Research Impact

1. The Non-Linear Public Policy Framework (developed in Reimagining Public Policy Formulation and Analysis, Discover Global Society, 2023) has been applied as the primary theoretical framework in a doctoral dissertation research examining variations in the implementation of Individualised Education Plans (IEPs) across Tennessee, USA by Dr. Jonathan Pemberton under the supervision of Prof. Bethany Powers, Lincoln Memorial University, USA.

2. My co-authored Safetipin research (Manazir, Govind & Rubina, 2019) informed Cole Peters's (2022) master's thesis, The Digital Camp: Navigating the Future of e-Participation in Refugee Camps, within the joint MSc Metropolitan Analysis, Design and Engineering programme at Delft University of Technology and Wageningen University & Research, the Netherlands. Findings from the study contributed 11 analytical factors to the Digital Camp Framework, extending their application from Indian urban settings to refugee-camp contexts.
